

NOT ALONE

Working Together in the Fight
Against Human Trafficking

Available beginning in January 2022
Reservations open now

Human trafficking is one of the most significant issues facing communities today, yet it is commonly misunderstood and often undetected. Recent statistics suggest there are hundreds of thousands of labor and sex trafficking victims in Texas at any given time.

This original exhibition created by the Bullock Texas State History Museum educates visitors about human trafficking and provides tools and resources to find help and support survivors.

ABOUT THE EXHIBITION

Not Alone centers on a series of guiding questions:

- What is trafficking?
- Who does trafficking affect?
- What role do healthy relationships play?
- What role does technology and social media play?
- What can I do?

In each section, visitors can scan a QR code to access original videos virtually, featuring interviews with advocates and survivors.

The Bullock Museum worked with an advisory group in developing the exhibition content, including the Office of the Governor Public Safety Office and the Texas Human Trafficking Task Force, Governor's Commission for Women, McCain Institute, National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, and Love146.
