Matt Herron: You see rows of police guarding the State Capitol from being overrun and burned to the ground and a local citizen going after a photographer in the foreground. I had a rule in demonstrations, a very simple one, keep moving. It always takes a little while for the locals to decide if they're going to get a hold of you and beat you up. And by that time you'd better be in another location. I always moved very restlessly through scenes like this.
